

Get me to the Greek – easyJet holidays re-starts Crete breaks following government announcement

16 October 2020 – With the news that holidaymakers can once again visit Crete quarantine-free, easyJet holidays is resuming breaks to the Greek hotspot.

Holidays will be available to book from tomorrow, 17 October, with last minute sun seekers able to fly in to Heraklion from 24 October. Renowned for its food, history, and scenic surroundings, visitors to the island can enjoy beautiful beaches as well famous city sights.

Recognising consumer nervousness around travel, the holiday provider launched a set of Covid Commitments to ensure customer safety and reassurance when booking a break.

And customers will have peace of mind knowing that, as well as being an ABTA member, all easyJet holidays are ATOL protected and are covered by the easyJet holidays Protection Promise. This industry leading, customer first policy launched in September 2020 and offers ultimate flexibility and protection. The Promise offers a refund guarantee, freedom to change a booking, a reduced balance due date, a Best Price Guarantee and deposit refunds, should plans change, letting customers book with confidence. Customers can also rest assured that if the holiday firm needs to cancel a holiday, they will be refunded in an average of 12 days.

Paul Bixby, easyJet holidays Commercial Director, said “We know people have really missed their holidays this year and Greece is one of our favourite destinations, so we welcomed yesterday’s announcement and we’re really pleased to re-start holidays to Crete in time for October half term. We’ve got some fantastic offers for anyone looking for a last-minute sunshine getaway.

“We’re also committed to giving our customers peace of mind, which is why we launched our Covid Commitments and our Protection Promise, which lets people book their holidays with the reassurance that if things change they are protected. We pride ourselves on being on our customers side, always.”
